

KING GEORGE TRIES TO HUSH CARD SCANDAL

LONDON, June 5.—George is busy with the story of a card scandal that may have a sensational development as the Gordon-Kings case at Trarrah Croft, in which King Edward, then the Prince of Wales, appeared as a witness in connection with the case.

The new affair has already had remarkable consequences, among them the abatement of a number of guests who had been invited to attend the King's dinner at Buckingham Palace on Derby night, and the decision of the King to remain in town over the Whitstable holiday in order to confer with the persons concerned in the case.

His Majesty is doing his utmost to keep the affair quiet and prevent anything in the nature of a public scandal, but so far only a compromise has been reached, which certain parties interested refuse to accept as final.

IN ROYAL HOUSEHOLD

The person against whom the charges of cheating at cards are made is a member of the royal household who has been winning considerable sums at poker at the St. James club since the late autumn. The club members are two well known men, and the reports of the cheating reached the royal ears on the first day of the season card meeting, and it was intimated that until the matter was cleared up several members of the Jockey Club would refuse to recognize the man in question. As he was the case of the guests invited to the Derby night dinner it was suggested to the King that his invitation be withdrawn or the invitation sent to the undersigned guest that he would be well advised to make some excuse for not appearing.

This King George has refused to do so, and has insisted that the charges of cheating be proven. The result was that every royal personage except the Derby dinner, including Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duke of Teck and nearly every prominent member of the Jockey Club, remained away from the dinner.

After the interview at Buckingham Palace on Whitstable the King suggested to the members of the household that who was accused or, at all events, suspected of cheating, that he leave England, at least for a time, but that the household should be pointed back refused to do so. He denies there is the slightest truth in any of the charges made against him. Several members of the royal household are involved in the scandal, among them a woman who is one of Queen Mary's most intimate friends. At the King's inquiry, the affair has been compromised for the present by the courtier and his two accusers agreeing not to enter the cardroom of any of their London clubs.

SALEM GIRL OF 17 DISAPPEARS WITH BOARDER

Edward Stillman of No. 5 Hall street, Salem, has appealed to the police of that city to find his seventeen-year-old daughter Dorothy, who disappeared yesterday about the same time as Edward H. Buffum, twenty-five, a boarder for two years in his house.

Miss Stillman, who is described as a very attractive girl, has for some time been employed at Coffey's drug store, No. 127 Essex street, Salem, as superintendent of the photographic supplies department. She left store at some yesterday, as usual, but did not return to work in the afternoon or evening.

The family, until yesterday afternoon, consisted of Mr. Stillman and his aged father, his daughter, Dorothy, and the boarder, Buffum. Of the latter, Stillman's last evening said he knew little, except that, as far as he knew, his boarder was not steadily employed.

An agent of the American Express Company in Salem was called at the Stillman house yesterday afternoon in response to an order, and took a trunk to the Salem railroad station. He did not see a man, this man is supposed by Stillman to have been Buffum.

LEWIS' ATTACK AT SOCIAL 'CROST' BOKE INTO SANABO BOKE

How T. Howard Lewis, the departed manager of the Boston office of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company, was driven by personal extravagance into a career strategy like that of George F. Williams, the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, came to light today.

The inside story of Lewis' affairs, told today for the first time to the AMERICAN, shows that, like Williams, Lewis was enabled to gather the money he needed and which belonged to his company by means of notes.

Additional work on the books new to him had much Lewis in a short time will be more than $1,000,000 in a sanitarium—a wreck here in the public story, as told by Lewis of the company.

WRECKED BY AMBITION. "It is a story of an overwhelming ambition on the part of a local employer to get new business for his great company in New York, in his struggle with social prestige Lewis went the limit of extravagance."

"On a salary of $50,000, with an additional $10,000 a year in commission and bonuses, Lewis attempted to maintain two expensive homes and a suite at the Hotel George. His extravagance and ambition were not with a view to further his way into the most exclusive circles in the city but that he would be able to write additional insurance for his wealthy friends."

"Mr. Lewis did not have the handling of the funds of the Boston branch, so it was a puzzle for us to explain the deficit when the short report became known."

"Our careful auditing it appears that Mr. Lewis, in his personal dealings, took certain notes for extensions in the payment of premiums—extending the life of the policy—holders' interest until they were able to meet their notes."

"These notes were probably discredited by Mr. Lewis and the money received converted to his personal use."

TRIED TO SWING TOO MUCH. "It also appears that Mr. Lewis may have made loans on certain policies and then borrowed money on the strength of the policies."

"People naturally inquired for the manager when they saw important business to transact, and this made it possible for Mr. Lewis to do a personal business with such customers, unknown to the other officials of the office. By so doing he obtained the use of the money for long periods at a time."

"It does not think that Mr. Lewis intended for a moment to be dishonest with the company's funds. He merely sought, to keep up appearances in the legitimate occupation of writing insurance for his wealthy associates."

"He was trying to swing too much. He failed to add the expense of his business which he anticipated from the company's funds."

"It does not seem to reason that Mr. Lewis intended to defraud the company. He knew that everything would have to be accounted for at the end of six days. He was using his ability and common sense to keep the company's funds from being lost. It was a human impossibility. Mr. Lewis was not a thief. He was a man who tried to realize his expectations he became a worry."

"Advertise," Says Committee to Big Lighting Company PHILADELPHIA, June 5.

The report of a special investigating committee presented to the National Electrical and Power convention indicated that even in an industry which is constantly growing and which now involves about $3,000,000 in capital, newspaper advertising is considered absolutely essential to prosperity and development.

The report was read by P. P. Kemble of Cincinnati, chairman of the association special committee on merchandising and advertising.

"Every central station must advertise in order to grow," Mr. Kemble said. "Yearly or semi-monthly advertising appropriations should be decided upon. Use all newspapers, but concentrate on those giving the best audience."

Limit the advertisement to one idea, spend the time and money to get the copy right, regularly check of getting the argument into the mind of the reader. Advertise continuously."

MILES SEES T. R. 1916 DEFEAT AS G. O. P. NOMINEE

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 5.—General Nelson A. Miles, former ranking officer of the United States army, predicted Thursday Roosevelt will make the fight of his life for another presidential term, and that he will be the nominee of the Republican party and that he will be overwhelming if defeated.

"In my judgment, nothing can prevent the Republicans from rallying around Colonel Roosevelt next time," said General Miles. "He will get the nomination and be a great master personality in the period preceding the convention. Then he will get into the campaign and will ride to a full."

"The river of doubt that he discovered in Brazil is the last straw. The river was known on the map a century or more ago. It bears the same relation to geographic discovery as his historic and heroic charge up San Juan Hill bears to the Spanish-American War. Roosevelt was not at San Juan Hill."

Professor Frederick F. Gay of the University of California, contestant of the $100,000 will of the late Benjamin W. Parker of Watertown, Massachusetts, broker and realtor, will today testify before Judge King and a Suffolk jury, day was a nephew of Parker and received but $500 by the will, while the testator's brother, Clark Parker of Watertown, received in trust all but $4,000 of the estate.

Dr. Leslie H. Spencer testified Parker suffered from hardness of the arteries and toward the end of his life "was cranky, stubborn, childish, and hard to influence."

He said he had never heard Benjamin mention the name of his brother, Clark. He said Benjamin spoke frequently of Dr. Gay, his nephew.

PROFESSOR GAY TESTIFIES IN WILL CONTEST

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 5.—General Nelson A. Miles, former ranking officer of the United States army, predicted Thursday Roosevelt will make the fight of his life for another presidential term, and that he will be the nominee of the Republican party and that he will be overwhelming if defeated.

"In my judgment, nothing can prevent the Republicans from rallying around Colonel Roosevelt next time," said General Miles. "He will get the nomination and be a great master personality in the period preceding the convention. Then he will get into the campaign and will ride to a full."

"The river of doubt that he discovered in Brazil is the last straw. The river was known on the map a century or more ago. It bears the same relation to geographic discovery as his historic and heroic charge up San Juan Hill bears to the Spanish-American War. Roosevelt was not at San Juan Hill."

Professor Frederick F. Gay of the University of California, contestant of the $100,000 will of the late Benjamin W. Parker of Watertown, Massachusetts, broker and realtor, will today testify before Judge King and a Suffolk jury, day was a nephew of Parker and received but $500 by the will, while the testator's brother, Clark Parker of Watertown, received in trust all but $4,000 of the estate.

Dr. Leslie H. Spencer testified Parker suffered from hardness of the arteries and toward the end of his life "was cranky, stubborn, childish, and hard to influence."

He said he had never heard Benjamin mention the name of his brother, Clark. He said Benjamin spoke frequently of Dr. Gay, his nephew.

PEACE EMBASSY ANGERED AT LEADING OF ARMS FOR REBELS

Office to notice of a blockade is necessary, officials say. It is believed here that when the gunboats appear, Admiral Mayo will confer with the Federal commanders. Should they not come to an understanding on the question of blockade it will be up to the American admiral to resort to force.

CHANCE FOR HURTS.

This act would give Hurts a chance to call off mediation on the plea that the United States is not acting in good faith. According to international law the United States has no right to interfere with a blockade of a Mexican port by the Federalists, lawyers say.

Meanwhile the State Department continues its efforts to induce Carranza to accept an armistice and join the mediation conference. As this would remove the embarrassing problem of the shipment of supplies, it is believed here that Carranza is holding off his reply to the note of the mediators asking him to join in the conference until he can sacrifice the cause the Washington administration intends to pursue regarding the Tampico blockade.

SILLIMAN, NOW AT CAPITAL, TO SEE BRYAN ON MEXICO

WASHINGTON, June 5.—John S. Silliman, the American vice-consul in Mexico, was imprisoned and threatened.

SAW U. S. CITIZENS SHOT BY MEXICANS

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 5.—George Denison, a local oil man, who has just returned from Mexico, declares that he saw thirty Americans shot down in cold blood by Mexican soldiers while fleeing for his life to Tuxpan.

Denison was an employee of the Aguilar Oil Company, an English concern, and three weeks ago was working at Paramito, fifty-two miles from Tuxpan, when conditions became so critical that it was deemed advisable for all Americans to flee the country at once. They immediately hastened from the town on which they had been working and boarded a train for Tuxpan. The women and children had been sent to the point hours before and got there safely.

The Mexicans learned the news of the American men to flee and the refugees were stripped of all their possessions before they were permitted to board the train. The train proceeded to the town of Pania, where it was stopped by a band of forty rebels. The Americans drove off the desperadoes and then found the train crew would not start the train again. Denison says it was necessary to place revolvers at the heads of the train officials in order to get under way.

At the Tuxpan river on account of renewed fighting between the Mexican forces, the Americans were compelled to abandon the train and make the remaining twelve miles into Tuxpan on foot.

Denison, Charles Greer of California and Frank Smith of Pittsburgh became separated from their

with execution by the Mexican Federalists at Saltillo, arrived in Washington early today. He went at once to a hotel to rest before calling on Secretary of State Bryan. He declined to discuss the experiences in the Mexican prison.

complaints and made the journey on June 5.

Denison says that the assassination of the thirty Americans occurred at a point far off their direct route and the three refugees were hiding in a clump of trees when they saw the tragedy. The Americans were making an effort to reach Tuxpan by boat when they were held up and captured by the Mexicans. He says the Mexicans held little time but quickly marched the Americans to convenient places and shot them down like cattle.

Previous to the execution the Americans had all been tightly bound.

Damaged Harp Puzzles the Court

Judge Bennett, after an all-day hearing, is puzzled over a civil case involving a damaged harp. Dominick Laferriere, the owner of the instrument, wants $100 damage from Thomas J. Laferriere, the expressman whom he claims damaged the harp.

Evidence that the harp was carefully handled in the hotel where it was checked prior to being carried away by the expressman raised some doubts in the mind of the court. Anxiously values the harp at $200.

Filene's Great Preparations for Summer "Good Times" in the Filene's MISSSES' and GIRLS' SHOPS

$22.50 $10 $15

The Misses' Shop Is White With Graduation Dresses

Every day brings in prettier things—one would think the excitement of graduation had got into the makers themselves. All kinds of dresses—simple ones, and fluffy ones; inexpensive ones that any girl can be proud to wear; and costly ones for girls who can afford it. The picture shows only a few. The dress marked $10 is a tulle-trimmed net and lace dress with Tom Thumb ruffled blouse and skirt of flounces.

The one marked $15 is an attractive combination of filmy white net and lace and heavy cream Venice insertion. The one marked $22.50 is a combination dress of embroidered net with a capish look about the shoulders.

Don't You Think These Are Remarkable Dresses?

A white crepe de chine with pleated Russian tunic, hemstitched blouse, big organdie collar and Roman stripe girdle at $16.50.

A candy-stripe voile dress with box-pleated long tunic and Roman stripe girdle at $7.50.

A crepe-voile Russian tunic dress in unusually becoming pastel colors with generous collar of hand-embroidered organdie at $7.50.

Stripe linen and percale dresses at $3.95.

Fourth Floor.

Tub Skirt Time

Many girls like a plain tub skirt—Here is one of white cordaline at $3.

A wide white cordaline long tunic skirt is $3. Choosing is very good in misses' skirts at $3.95. One type is plain and pocketed cordaline with loose yoke girdle in plain and pocketed cordaline with loose yoke ruffle. Another has a pocket cleverly set in the hip tub skirting, because it doesn't wrinkle and is simple to launder.

Plenty of Misses' Check Skirts

Checks are well liked for Summer. Somehow looking light and cool helps to make them so. Misses' check tunic skirts are $5 and $7.50.

Fourth Floor.

A Real Sale in the Misses' Corset Shop

Not often one happens upon a sale of girls' and misses' underwaists and corsets. Too hard to get them to sell for less than regular prices. But for that matter, it isn't often that one happens upon a Specialty Corset Shop like this for girls and misses.

Girls and misses may have the same scientific fitting service that has developed the Women's Corset Shop into one of the best known in the country.

Girls' Puff-Underwaists-6 to 14 Years

37c for 50c lace-trimmed cambric underwaists, with double underarm sections.

18c for 25c plain reinforced underwaists of fine cambric.

$1.29 for Misses' 12 Corsets

Sizes 19 to 26 inches, in lightly boned topless corsets. A rubber insert at the waist line gives freedom in dancing or athletics. Side and front hose supporters of elastic webbing.

Fourth Floor.

$3.95 for $7.50 Flowered Voile Dresses for "Flappers"

Just-right dresses whose tunics will make a thin girl look fatter and whose trimness of line will make a fat girl look thinner. They have shades of black, moire, and yokes of tucked net. Sizes 13 to 17.

Gingham, rep, crepe, linen and middie dresses for hard-to-fit girls, $2 to $7.50.

Graduation Dresses

For grammar school girls. Voiles, organdies, nets and batistes. You're apt to find something very nice for less than you expected to pay.

Bloomer Dresses for girls of 6 to 12, $1.

Fourth Floor.

"Piping Rock"—A New Misses' Cape Coat

A very fair compromise between cape and coat—the front is half-fitted like a coat, but the "sleeves" are unmistakably capish. In light-weight poplin, serges and checks, at $15.

Besides the "Piping Rock" there are at least fifteen other kinds of cape coats in the Misses' Shop—white chinchillas; blue serges, poplins, broadcloths and Shepherd checks.

Misses' White Coats

Wide wale white serge cape coats are $12.50.

Swinging sag-belted white serge coats with Roman stripe collars at $15.

Lined white serge and chinchilla tailored coats are $15.

White cut velvet coats with short back belts are $8.75.

Prices Have Tumbled for Good on Girls' Coats

All the serge and check coats that were new only a few weeks ago are now wearing humber prices. Instead of being $5 to $15, they're $3.95, $5 and $7.50. There are not all sizes of every kind of coat, but choosing is very good. They range from 6 to 14 years.

Fourth Floor.

A "Stock Up" Sale of Misses' Undermuslins

It will pay to buy them by the half dozen. All fresh and perfect.

FINE AMERICAN HORSES PROUD OF MEDALS WON

If you see a fine appearing horse drawing an American delivery wagon, observe whether a shield-shaped medal is dangling from the collar of his harness. If there is, then the horse is "Champ" or one of the six other prize-winners honored by the World Horse Relief Association. The horses are proud of their new laurels.

"Champ," king of the AMERICAN heavy horses, was driven by Walter Shins in the contest. He was in the mail service division of the News Delivery Class, as distinguished from the "Horse Delivery," the "Baby Service" and so on.

"Champ's" job takes about horses. His queue to the railroad terminals with wagon and bundled papers weighing a ton and one-half.

"Champ" is a black horse, six years old and in the service of the AMERICAN for five years.

Further honor has come to "Champ." He has had his "picture taken" by the Boston Horse Relief Association, to be used in the Association's next catalogue.

The picture is being used, not only for "Champ's" own good looks, but also to demonstrate the human harness, with its open bridle, which has the stamp of the Association's approval.

The AMERICAN stables swept the field in the News Delivery classes, taking five firsts and two second prizes.

MELLEN IS NOW TO BE PROSECUTED; HE EXPOSED ROCKEFELLER AND MORGAN—THEY WILL BE FULLY SHIELDED BY HIS PROSECUTION

By B. C. FORBES.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—I learn on inside authority that Attorney-General McReynolds has begun action to prosecute Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven Railroad, under the Grand Trunk indictment, returned in 1912.

This will greatly surprise Mellen, who believed, I gathered in talking with him, that he was now immune after having given sworn testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The political interpretation of the embittered Attorney-General's belated activity is that he wants, if possible, to have the courts rule that Governor Folk's questioning of Mellen has won the latter immunity.

By confirming his prosecution to Mellen, McReynolds will not run the risk of incurring the ire of the powerful Morgan-Rockefeller-Baker clique, even should the courts disappoint him by ruling that no immunity has been granted New Haven witnesses.

DENIES BOSTON NEEDS WOMEN'S LODGING HOUSE

There is no need for a municipal women's lodging house. This is the reply of places now where even the poorest woman can find a good lodging house.

A municipal house where the women would be housed to assist would not be needed for the reason that it would affect well on the character of the women of Boston.

It is the statement of Mrs. Thomas H. Tyler, street matron of the Fenway Children's Home, that there is no need for a municipal women's lodging house.

She said that there are many charitable institutions in Boston where the women can find a good lodging house.

A CARD

Saturday Children's Day

It is somewhat of a coincidence that Mollie, Waddy and Tony, the children's own elephants, should arrive on Saturday—our Children's Day.

We wish to congratulate the Boston Post on carrying to a successful conclusion the acquisition of these famous elephants, soon to be such a source of pleasure to all children of Greater Boston.

We have prepared some special features in our store for the children after the events are over at Fenway Park; and all children accompanied by parents or relatives will receive a souvenir with our best compliments.

By ALL MEANS BRING THE CHILDREN TO BOSTON. Grown-ups as well as children from out of town will find many innovations here to attract them on Saturday.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Drastic Reform or Public
Ownership, Says Mellen

The extraordinary statement made by Charles S. Mellen to the AMERICAN and published Sunday was at once a confession of existing evils in railroad management and a detailed recommendation of methods for averting these evils in future.

Mr. Mellen, as the right-hand man of the late J. P. Morgan for the last fifteen years, enforcing that imperious magnate's will in railroads both West and East, is in an admirable position to know all about the evils, abuses and corruption of railroad management.

Directors who do not direct; officers who are paid exorbitant salaries in order that they may be the more subservient to the financier who gives them their jobs; minority stockholders who are without power to enforce their rights; bankers who extort heavy commissions for marketing railroad securities that the roads should market for themselves; a system of accounting which enables a railroad to spend millions in bribery and corruption or in mere gross extravagance without the fact being brought to the attention of the stockholders, are all facts that enter into Mellen's indictment of railroad management as practiced today by bankers of the type of Morgan & Co.

But, reduced to its essence, the Mellen statement is that the centralization of control of a railroad system in the hands of one man is dangerous because, as he rightly says, "absolute power will be abused by 99 out of every 100 men."

Nobody is in a better position to speak on the subject than Mr. Mellen. He was one of the officials paid an exorbitant salary. He was utterly servile in his obedience to the man who called him from a western railroad and made him president of the New Haven railroad, tossing him a $60,000 salary, which the stockholders paid, to keep him loyal. No director directed, if directing meant questioning the imperial will of Morgan. No statements issued to the stockholders were explicit enough to show why the $5,000,000 Westchester road was bought for $11,000,000, nor did they show political contributions, nor sums expended in barefaced bribery.

With the evils he now denounces Mr. Mellen was a man thoroughly identified that he may well say of them: "All of these I saw; part of them I was."

Curiously enough, the day before Mr. Mellen's statement saw the light, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, was relating before the Interstate Commerce Commission the methods by which Mr. Morgan unloaded on that railroad the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, then in practically a bankrupt condition. Morgan was added with the C, H. & D. It, in turn, was burdened with the Pere Marquette, another lame duck.

Morgan, who was never a railroad builder, never capable of taking a struggling road and carrying it on to success, sought to unload these properties on some railroad in which his interest was dominant. He tried the Erie, and actually forced the directors to ratify the purchase of the road, grossly overcapitalized as it was, but President Underwood protested so vigorously at the price that the directors later rescinded the contract. Then Morgan dumped the railroads, water and all, upon the B. & O., which has been crippled by the infiction ever since.

That deal was characteristic of Morgan. It was the act of a juggler with stocks and bonds, not a railroad builder; a man who had no thought of making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before, but rather took a few spears of grass planted by somebody else, made them into a bundle and sold them to the public for a bale of hay.

Mr. Mellen's suggested remedies for the evils of railroad management are all wise, mostly obvious, and practicable. Like most practical men he refuses to accept dissolution as the best remedy for the evils of concentration. The economy and efficiency of monopoly are too obvious to be lightly thrown away. They must be kept, while at the same time the possessors of the monopoly must be so hedged about by enforced law that they will not use their power for the purpose of extortion or of unlawful gains. That regulation Mr. Mellen thinks possible, but he thinks, too, in common with far-seeing people, that it will lead to government ownership.

For how clear it is that, if the directors of a road are to be allowed no illegal gains from construction companies, supply companies and the like, they might as well serve on suitable salaries for the government as for the private corporation.

If the president is no longer to be paid exorbitantly to do the will of some Wall Street magnate, but is to be limited to fair pay for good work, he might as well draw that pay from the United States Treasury as from Morgan & Co. As Mr. Mellen very truthfully points out:

"The cry against public ownership will vanish in the air when the opportunity for a profit out of the concessions, so to speak, of the business is gone."

But, pending the inevitable assumption by the government of ownership and operation of railroads, the reforms possible under private ownership should be incessantly urged. They include:

- 1.—Directors who will attend to business and are paid a salary which they earn.
- 2.—A president responsible to the directors only and paid by them.
- 3.—No secret directors' meetings, but all open to the public.
- 4.—Bookkeeping intended to show instead of conceal the nature of expenditures made.
- 5.—Protection of minority stockholders' rights.
- 6.—No more bankers underwriting syndicates, but all stocks and bonds to be sold by the road itself.

This program is so obviously right that it will awaken the bitter hostility of all the financiers and railroad looters who have profited by the existing order of things. Its adoption would drive the parasites from railroad offices and make the business of carrying passengers and freight as simple as any other honest calling.

The AMERICAN congratulates Mr. Mellen upon his frank and rather courageous exposition of an evil condition and its necessary remedy.

For seven years the AMERICAN fought Mr. Mellen while he was a part of Morgan and his Wall Street confederates. In giving the public the benefit of his great knowledge and experience, he deserves the praise of all good men.

THE ONLY WAY

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

All legal efforts to stop the plundering of stockholders by grafting railroad directors have failed. Public ownership alone offers a remedy. The New Haven's ex-president, Charles S. Mellen, said to the AMERICAN:

"This democratic republic cannot endure if men continue the accumulation of gigantic fortunes, with all the arrogance and servility which follow." The looting of the New Haven made it plain that public ownership is the only means by which such gigantic robberies can be prevented in the future.

Montaigne and L'Hopital

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

HISTORY affords us more or less information of several illustrious states—that of Themistocles to Admetus, of Hannibal to France, of the Queen of Sheba to King Solomon, of Emerson to Carlyle, of Milton to Tullier, of George Fox to Cromwell, and so on; but second to no one of them in adding human interest is the visit that was made three hundred and forty-two years ago by Montaigne to L'Hopital.

About the meeting of the two famous men there was nothing dramatic, no blaze of trumpets or display of red fire; it was a quiet meeting, but bristling with the student of human character and the principles of the higher ethics. The ex-Chancellor of France, L'Hopital, was verging close upon the line beyond which man's chance of continued existence is slim, and Montaigne had barely reached his prime, being only forty. L'Hopital was in "dimness," and was spending his last days there at his country home of Vigay, surrounded by his family, his children and grand-children, and the nature that he so dearly loved. Montaigne was at the height of his rich and splendid fame, admired by all of the realm, and almost worshipped by the entire literary world of his day. Now look at the two men again. L'Hopital is one of the finest characters to be found in the whole scope of history. If there is any

Temperatures at the Poles

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"At the time when such animals as mastodons and other large animals lived in the northern part of this earth, was it then warm at the poles? If so, why is it cold today? An scientist has proved that the sun's rays squarely strike the poles, once a year, for a short time, then again, why are the poles constantly frozen?"

A. Yes, the climate was surely very mild at the North Pole, for in the stomachs of the huge beasts shrouded in northern blizzards undigested remains and seeds of plants were found, but these plants now grow only in temperate and even tropical zones. And the cold snap came on suddenly, for the creature had no time to escape the morass in which he was feeding and reach higher ground.

The cause of this sudden cold is unknown. Ignoring Denoll and others advocate the theory that large quantities of stones and drift fell on earth from frigid spaces. But astronomers cannot prove this.

The axis of the earth is inclined to the plane of its orbit at an angle of 23 degrees 27 minutes; therefore the rays of the sun do not fall squarely upon either pole.

Q.—"How is the oxygen gas constant in our atmosphere?"

A.—This is one of the most remarkable adjustments of nature. Animals appropriate oxygen from the air, giving out carbonic acid gas. Plants appropriate this gas and pour forth oxygen.

But the quantity of oxygen mixed with the nitrogen is the same in proportion and so goes the breath that mother made, and so on, which is all well enough if the woman has a talent for housewifery, and can bake really good bread. Otherwise let us patronize the baker and the domestic

The Domestic Millennium

It Will Arrive When the Incompetent Servant Girl is Crowded Out by Professionals Who Have a Bent for Housework

By DOROTHY DIX

A PROMINENT woman, of the new feminist school, who possesses a beautiful home, a perfectly good husband, and a flourishing law practice, recently scandalized her old-fashioned sisters very much by declaring that she only devoted twenty minutes a day to her housekeeping.

"There, did you hear that?" cried the old-fashioned women, who were slaves to their housekeeping. "Just think of doing your housekeeping in twenty minutes! Why, we put in almost that many hours doing ours, and will wager our new Spring hats against a coxey that there's dust under her beds, and loaves of bread in her garbage can, and that poor, neglected husband of hers never has a mouthful that is fit to eat!"

But in this the ladies guessed wrongly. There isn't a better run house in the community, nor better dressed than those of the twenty-minute-a-day housekeeper. The reason of this is because the real mechanics of the household are carried on by an intelligent young woman who is a graduate of a domestic science school where she has been taught that a budget is next in sacredness to the ten commandments and to market so scientifically and economically that it makes the average housewife look like a prodigal daughter bent on riotously wasting her substance.

The experience of this woman lawyer, who provides all the comforts of a home for her family, and who conserves her time and strength for the practice of her profession, is interesting in two ways. First, because it gives a practical answer to the question: "What will become of the home if women continue to follow after the gods of the business or profession for which they have prepared themselves, and in which they were successful?"

These women will simply hire a professional to run their homes, and do their cooking and sweeping, and marketing, as a business man hires his housekeepers, and clerks, and truck drivers to do the details of his business. It has always been an economic waste to put a woman with a fifty-dollar-a-week earning capacity into a kitchen to do a six or seven-dollar-a-week job.

Moreover, because a woman was a crackbrained neurologist, or a hysterical adolescent, or a talented newspaper woman, or lawyer, or doctor, was no guarantee that she could cook. On the contrary, it was pretty certain that such a woman, having devoted herself to other activities, would be utterly ignorant of all domestic affairs, and turn out a brand of housekeeping that would give love's young dream his depression.

Of course we all cling to the old ideal about the women making the home with their own hands, and the bread that mother made, and so on, which is all well enough if the woman has a talent for housewifery, and can bake really good bread. Otherwise let us patronize the baker and the domestic science school, instead of trusting our digestions to the amateur efforts of ex-business women.

The reason that so many women hate domesticity and complain so much about having to do household duties is because the fit and the unfit are forced into it.

It would be just as sensible to compel every man to be a lawyer, or a doctor, or a farmer as it is to compel every married woman to be a housekeeper. Men are unhappy enough when they are forced into occupations for which they have neither liking nor aptitude. Also almost every man who follows an unbecoming occupation does his work badly, bunglingly, half-heartedly, and makes a failure of it.

Why, then, should we be surprised that the woman who hates the sight of a needle, and loathes making beds, should be a miserable housekeeper, and fill the air with her whines and lamentations? She's simply a round peg in a square hole, and the time will come when we will have intelligence enough to tell her to get out and do the kind of work she wants to do, and can do well, and put some competent woman who enjoys housework in her kitchen. And this will also only be for her good, but for the good of her family.

Prophecy is the richest of all trades, but I venture to predict this—that in the near future the incompetent, ignorant servant girl, who is the source of so much aggravation and waste and indignation, will be eliminated. And she will be eliminated in this way. The married woman who has a taste and talent for domesticity, and who realizes that cooking is one of the most interesting of all the fine arts to follow, will do her own housework. This will be relieved of most of the drudgery that has formerly attached to it by means of electrical devices and all manner of labor-saving inventions.

The woman who does not like housework, and who does enjoy working outside of the home, will follow her own true bent, and profession, and put into her home an educated, intelligent houseworker who will be as competent in her line as the business woman is in hers.

This will do away with the odious class of the servant class, and which has belonged to it simply because the servant class has been ignorant and incompetent. Thus will be opened up an inexhaustible field for women whose talent is for domesticity. They refuse to become servants, but they would be perfectly willing to be housekeepers, trained in a recognized profession, and commanding a good salary.

With a highly certified professional in the kitchen, no woman would need give more than twenty minutes to her housekeeping. In this way will the domestic millennium arrive, when every woman will do housework who has a bent that way, and like it.

Wedding Traditions

By MISS FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today"

I N June we are particularly drawn to this theme. Many are the emblems, symbols, rhymes, adages, customs and superstitions connected with weddings.

The general rule is for a bride to conform to traditional customs. There is no doubt that every bride is more or less influenced by them, even if she is otherwise a very progressive person.

The flowers of all others which have been chosen for brides to wear, and which are symbols of prosperity and happiness, are the white flowers. From very ancient times roses, myrtle, hyacinths and lilies have been favorites for brides to wear. They are symbols of love and purity. To wear a spray of natural white flowers is considered to bring good fortune. Good luck is invariably courted by a bride in complying with the old custom of wearing on her wedding day.

"Something old and something new, 'Something borrowed and something blue."—This is the traditional rhyme.

The day of the week chosen for a wedding depends often on the rhyme, "It is a day of blessing, or the reverse." From Tuesday for wealth, Wednesday for crosses, Friday for leanness, Saturday for luck at all.

Many brides venture to defy fate by choosing a Friday for a wedding day, although none are sufficiently foolish to do so on a Saturday.

An old custom which has been considered an ill-omenous month for wedding is the month of June. It is supposed to be the first one of the group to be married.

the frequent rains in May have something to do with the fact, as "bride" weather" should be full of sunshine, according to the old saying, "Happy is the bride that the sun shines on."

And May is gone. Custom requires that the best man should have the care of the wedding ring, because his duty is to think of everything for the bridegroom, relieve him of any care and prevent any mistakes of forgetfulness which sometimes afflict a bridegroom.

At the proper time in the marriage ceremony the best man gives the ring to the bridegroom. And here follows a very beautiful custom, with a deep and sacred significance. The bridegroom places the ring in the bride's hand, and she places it on the third finger of the bride's left hand.

It is obvious in this simple ceremony that a circle has been formed which is a symbol of the endless contract made in the marriage bond, the ring itself, in its plain circle, being an emblem of eternity.

Most women regard the wedding ring as a sacred and precious pledge and never remove it. It is for a share of protection in the adage, "There's a bride in every ring." Some brides, however, are willing to exchange it for a new one when they are married.

Sometimes a bride's husband's bouquet among her bridesmaids' bouquets is a very beautiful custom, which the bride's maid who carries it is supposed to be the first one of the group to be married.
